1. Too often our relationships become defined by sin patterns that become "set" or accepted. How does today's text give us Gospel hope that these sin patterns can be first observed and then repented of?

2. Ishmael was not the child of promise, yet God showed tender care to him and his mother, Hagar. How can God's example give us compassion and urgency towards the lost? Name one person with a different religion/worldview that you interact with and can pray for/share the Gospel with.

3. Where am I fighting for faith to believe that God is working in my current circumstances for my present and future good? Where do I need encouragement in the Gospel?
